Plenary Sessions

Kent Law School and the SLSA are delighted to host following plenary speakers:

Martin Partington

'Back to the future: the success and challenge of socio-legal scholarship' (3rd April, 17:00-18:00 KLT I)

Martin Partington retired from full-time academic life at the end of 2005. Before, he taught at the Bristol, Warwick and Brunel Universities and at the LSE. His principal research areas were housing law, administrative law and administrative justice, and legal education. He has recently authored an Introduction to the English Legal System, the 3rd edition of which was published by OUP in 2006. He is now an Emeritus Professor of the University of Bristol, and Senior Research Fellow at the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies. With Professor Dame Hazel Genn, he helped to establish the SLSA.

Nick Blomley

'Homelessness and the delusions of property'
(4th April 18:00-19:00 KLT I)

Nick Blomley has a PhD in Geography from the University of Bristol (1986). He has taught at UCLA and Boston, and is currently Professor of Geography at Simon Fraser University, in British Columbia, Canada. He has a long-standing interest in critical legal geography and is currently exploring the geographies of rights in relation to anti-begging law in Canada. His most recent book is Unsettling the City: Urban Land and the Politics of Property (2004, Routledge).

- 2) Professor Rosemary Hunter, University of Kent: Close encounters of a judicial kind: 'hearing' children's 'voices' in family law proceedings
- 3) Vanessa Bettinson, De Montfort University : The future of claims to resist removal by HIV+ Sufferers: The mother and child claim

Panel 2 (Session 6): Joint Law Panel with the AHRC Centre for Law, Gender and Sexuality Authors Meet Readers - Fathers Rights Activism and Law Reform in Comparative Perspective

Chair: Professor Rosemary Hunter, University of Kent

Editors: Professor Sally Sheldon & Professor Richard Collier (Hart Publishing, 2006)

Discussants: Felicity Kaganas (Brunel University), Professor Mavis Maclean (Oxford University), Julie McCandless (Keele University), Professor Fiona Raitt (University of Dundee)

This session, offered under the joint auspices of the ARHC Centre for Law, Gender and Sexuality and the SLISA Child and Family Law and Policy stream, will discuss Sheldon and Collier's recently published book on Fathers Rights activism and law reform. The Fathers Rights movement has gained considerable political prominence and has successfully lobbied for changes to family law in several western countries, in particular employing the rhetoric of equality, which translates into demands for fathers to enjoy 'equal time' with their children post-separation. These demands have often posed a dilemma for feminists, who on the one hand are attentive to the continuing unequal division of labour between mothers and fathers in intact families, and issues of family violence, but on the other hand also deploy equality discourses to advance their claims. Discussants will provide their own responses to the book, to be followed by the editors' responses, and general discussion around the issues raised.

Panel 3 (Session 7): Panel Discussion - Fiction, Families and the Law

Chair: Daniel Monk, Birkbeck College

This panel discussion is intended to be much like a reading group. The book that has been chosen for discussion is Heather Blazing by Colm Toibin (Published by Picador, 1992). There will be a panel of discussants but the session is intended to be informal. Discussants will be given the opportunity to speak about aspects of the book that interest them but it is hoped that all those attending will participate in the discussion. The protagonist of Heather Blazing is an elderly High Court Judge from Dublin. In the book memories of his childhood are interspersed with events from his public and private life. In the course of the novel he decides three family/welfare law cases - all of which challenge him as a Judge and as an individual. The book raises interesting issues and some of the questions we might want to talk about are as follows. Can family/welfare law cases be read as stories of nationhood? What role do judges' personal lives and experiences have on their judicial decision making? Can literature provide an alternative way of thinking about the relationship between law, families and the state? It is a short novel and so we hope that as many people as possible will take time to read it and attend the session.

Nuffield Report Panel Discussion (KSR 17, Session 5)

Chair: Professor Linda Mulcahy, Birkbeck College

In November 2006 the Nuffield Foundation published their final report on Law in the Real World: Improving our understanding of How Law Works. Copies of the report have been made available in your conference pack. This important document, written by three giants of the socio-legal community Dame Hazel Genn, Martin Partington and Sally Wheeler, raised a series of important questions about the state of empirical work on civil justice within our community which will continue to be debated for some time. This session is being put on to encourage debate within the socio-legal community about whether we think the authors have presented an accurate picture of the challenges we face as a community. Discussants include Prof Bronwen Morgan and Prof Fiona Cownie.

Joint Panel of the AHRC Centre for Law, Gender and Sexuality & Child and Family Law and Policy Stream - Authors Meet Readers - Fathers Rights Activism and Law Reform in Comparative Perspective (KSR 13, Session 6)

Chair: Professor Rosemary Hunter, Acting Director, AHRC Centre for Law, Gender and Sexuality, University of Kent

This session, offered under the joint auspices of the ARHC Centre for Law, Gender and Sexuality and the SLSA Child and Family Law and Policy stream, will discuss Sally Sheldon's and Richard Collier's recently published book on Fathers Rights activism and law reform (Hart Publishing, 2006). The Fathers Rights movement has gained considerable political prominence and has successfully lobbied for changes to family law in several western countries, in particular employing the rhetoric of equality, which translates into demands for fathers to enjoy 'equal time' with their children post-separation. These demands have often posed a dilemma for feminists, who on the one hand are attentive to the continuing unequal division of labour between mothers and fathers in intact families, and issues of family violence, but on the other hand also deploy equality discourses to advance their claims. Discussants will provide their own responses to the book, to be followed by the editors' responses, and general discussion around the issues raised.

Editors: Professor Sally Sheldon, University of Kent and Centre for Law, Gender and Sexuality
Professor Richard Collier, Newcastle University

Discussants: Felicity Kaganas, Co-chair, SLSA Children and Family Law and Policy stream, Brunel University
Professor Mavis Maclean, Oxford Centre for Family Law and Policy, Oxford University
Julie McCandless, Keele University and Centre for Law, Gender and Sexuality
Professor Fiona Raitt, University of Dundee

Feminist Perspectives on Land Law (KSR 15, Session 8)

Chair: Anne Bottomley, Kent Law School

Re(thinking) 'ownership' and 'property': Anne Bottomley and Helen Carr will introduce a roundtable discussion opening up to question the potential and limitations of these key soci-political ideas and the related legal forms and practices. In the light of the increased use of these terms within the emerging 'social enterprise' culture: what is being signaled? what is being presumed or intended? is there any transformative potential? how mobile and malleable are these concepts? and how far do they remain sedimented within the traditions of individuated private property forms and thinking?
